

Return to Regular View

Help The Screen Savers Save America

Help our new prez through his first White House crisis. Send your W keys to Washington.

By Roman Loyola

In a wacky welcome for President George W. Bush, pranksters from the departing Clinton administration reportedly removed the W keys from White House computer keyboards.

This may seem harmless on the surface, but the prank may actually inhibit the productivity of the Bush administration. Most URLs start with "www," so how will White House staffers enter Web addresses while surfing for vital information?

Communications from the White House will be misunderstood. The missing "W" wreaks havoc on words. "What" becomes "hat." "How" becomes "ho." "War" becomes "ar."

Most importantly, memos will have to be signed "President George Bush," instead of "President George W. Bush," opening the door for mistaken identity.

Chaos may erupt. Anarchy may be near.

It's up to The Screen Savers to save the day!

The W drive

The Screen Savers drive ended on January 29, 2001. We are no longer accepting W keys.

But it's not too late for you to save the nation. You can send your W key directly to the White House at this address:

The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Just don't tell them The Screen Savers sent you.

What do you think? Vote in today's Web poll or join the discussion in our chat room. You also can reach me via email.

Originally posted January 23, 2001

Return to Regular View